5. Mr. Joel Spruance - Teacher Induction Program

Dr. Lupini: explained the process of teacher induction and how it came to be at ENSATS.

Mr. Spruance: Introduced himself along with Chris Wood, Arborist Teacher and Julia Witsig, Wellness teacher. He thanked Dr. Lupini, Mary Kroesser and Brad Morgan for their support of this program. He also thanked Dr. Riccio and Shannon Donnelly. The goal of the program is to make sure they support teacher growth and transition especially teachers brand new to the profession. "We want to focus induction and mentoring and individualize it." There is a Teacher Academy and a Three Day orientation before school starts in the fall. There are a few extra days for brand new teachers, this is three days before orientation called Teacher Academy. The goal is to prepare them for day one using case studies. The state requires two years of orientation and mentoring and recommends three. "We run monthly mentor meetings in a classroom or program area to familiarize the teachers." After observations he meets with individual teachers to talk about licensure, the observation or anything else. New teachers are asked to observe experienced teachers at ENSATS. Central Office and the Title 2A grant offers professional development opportunities for teachers. First year teachers attend the academy, orientation, have an observation to collect data to help build a relationship for coaching. Some teachers are met with weekly, bi weekly or once a month.

Chris Wood: He came from teaching adults in the industry. He worked with Joel weekly. Joel was his teaching coach. Joel helped him with grading, evaluation, curriculum design and behavior problems. He also had a thirty year veteran co-teacher.

Joel Spruance: went on to discuss the program for second year teachers. He described how it works with the second year teachers, PD and meetings.

Julia Witsig, Wellness Teacher: She went through a mentor program at Hamilton Wenham. She feels ENSATS has a very good program and it was very beneficial for her. Joel was a mentor in licensure and evaluation systems. The consistency during the teacher academy was huge.

Joel Spruance: Talked about the character and ethics of the teachers at ENSATS. He went on to discuss the program for third year teachers and empowering them to be in charge of their professional development. They also have meeting times with Joel monthly. This program is individualized per teacher, it allows for interaction, a connection between administrators and teachers. It can help with teacher retention. We have had only two non-renewals over the last three years. The next steps are for consistency in the hiring process. We have had demo lessons during the interview. The teacher academy lasting throughout the year. Also bring some other PD to the program such as college courses for continued improvement. He offered a time for questions.

Mr. Strout: asked, "How many mentors are there?"

Joel Spruance: "I am the only one and there are also experienced teachers that help out."

Mr. Strout: asked, "How many teachers are willing to help?"

Joel Spruance: replied, "12-15 help with observations."

Dr. Picone: asked, "How many new teachers will there be in September?"

Joel Spruance: replied, "We have about fifty in their first three years now. We are expecting about sixteen this year."

Ms. McDonald: asked, "Is it a voluntary thing for veteran teachers to observe new teachers?"

Joel Spruance: Answered that he reaches out to teachers that might be willing to observe and work with him as a mentor. He has a few questions that he asks the observation teacher to complete.

Mr. Strout: Feels the best thing about the evaluation program is that it is not administrative and offers feedback from Joel.

Mr. Marquis: Thought that fifteen new teachers seems like a high number for this program.

Joel Spruance: stated that there has been a significant drop off of less than three year teachers leaving ENSATS. He also teaches a .2 class a day and the rest of his day is spent during observations.

Mr. Prazar: asked if the program might be offered to other teachers to observe each other not just less than three year teachers.

Joel Spruance: replied, "Yes, they are thinking of creating small teams to observe each other such as in the self-directed mode.

Mr. Strout: expressed the value of other teacher's evaluations and observations.
